“The results are in,” said Adam Sobel, Global Brand Director, FIFA. “The most important goal in any new version of the FIFA franchise is to significantly improve the feel and physicality of gameplay. In our research and testing, we knew we could hit the performance and feedback bars we set for FIFA if we improved the player avatar and gameplay engine, alongside the robust game-feel and simulation fidelity of last year's FIFA experience.” HyperMotion Technology is designed to replicate real-world player movement in any environment, including open-space/goal celebrations, player movement and speed in close proximity, and movement and speed away from the action. “FIFA 22 is the first major release to introduce the game's new technology HyperMotion Technology into the game's physics engine, and its features will impact every aspect of the experience,” said Adam Sessler, Senior Gameplay Engineer at EA SPORTS. “With the iterative approach of this new technology, players have a higher level of control over the game's many features to ensure that it delivers the best experience possible.” The player experience will benefit from new improvements to the Player Impact System (PIS), Player Response System (PRS), and Player Intelligence System (PIS) that allow for more intuitive and nuanced real-world analog control. The core game engine, ball physics and collision response have been improved to deliver more realistic and accurate gameplay, with improved gameplay responsiveness, improved player dribbling and collision detection, and animation timing. The new version of the Player Impact System will improve the amount of cover a player can receive through force and player movement, increasing the realism of the ball behaviour for pass, charge and goal kicks. The all-new Player Response System has been designed to increase the tempo and flow of the match, and will dynamically adapt to give players the confidence to take on more responsibility, respond to pressure and create chances in the final third of the pitch. In addition, a new and improved Player Intelligence System has been introduced, allowing for an enhanced approach to the AI-controlled Tactical Defences, Digital Defences, Smart Defences and Goalkeeper Defences that are all key components of the strategic AI in FIFA. FIFA 22 will launch early 2015 on PlayStation 4, Xbox One, Xbox 360, PlayStation 3, and Windows PC. Bats for the Big Apple The little mammals are making their home in Brooklyn. It

What's new:

- Top-to-toe. This year, FIFA '22 includes features to provide players with more detailed and comprehensive stats and progression, and more intuitive access to and use of those stats. There are more notifications and communication from CPU to player on big moments. There is enhanced goal control functionality. There are more layers of sliders on the player profiles to allow you to tailor suit and playing style. A game-specific engine also makes it possible for new hair styles and facial features, and even collarbones.
- More control. When a player performs a shot, he can now visually define the percentage of the shot that is intentional, as opposed to having to guess at it. Similarly, during free kicks, fans can now control the number of seconds the players have to shoot to increase accuracy. And it should become easier for defenders to force through players, and a new indicator will show when you have the chance to pressure the ball. (These are simple examples; check out the full FIFA '22 feature list for more in-depth details.)
- Select your Team. Squad management in the engine has been completely revamped. The Squad tab now has a simpler, more streamlined look, and text is now color-coded based on assignments (green is control player, yellow is support player, etc.). So selecting your new lineups is easier than ever. There are tons of new customisation options for how you want to play.
- Build a reputation. The Pro+ translation system has been enhanced so you can easily read text on the field in other languages, and you'll be able to monitor fans' reactions around the world. There are plenty of rewards to help you rise in the ranks: an extra challenge, a free trial to the most popular clubs, extra importable content, and more.
- Accent your club. Each of the 27 FIFA clubs now has a unique neighbourhood, made up of real-world locations that are a great source of inspiration to help bring your clubs to life.
- Show off your skills. In Game Skills, for the first time, you'll be able to demonstrate your FIFA skills in a new Pro Mode, allowing you to show off your skills in up to three views, including during transitions. And some fan requests have even made their way into the game: shoot from free kicks, use long-range free kicks, or throw through-ball for the first Football (also known as soccer or sometimes futbol) is arguably the most popular sport in the world, played in over 200 countries and territories. The FIFA series includes flagship games like FIFA, FIFA 21, and this year's FIFA 22. The series also includes more than 40 years of franchise history that spans across multiple generations of gaming consoles, including the original Playstation, Nintendo 64, Playstation 2, Xbox 360, and most recently the new generation Xbox One and Playstation 4, in addition to mobile platforms like iOS and Android. The FIFA series is one of the first sports video game series to truly combine the concept of realism with player control. What's New in FIFA 22? Powered by Football™ The core gameplay of FIFA 22 is powered by Football, also known as the world's No. 1 ball sport. This year's FIFA arrives with a host of innovations and improvements in a balanced and authentic football experience. The latest update in the history of the FIFA series enhances a new game engine that features faster and more realistic player movement, all in a beautiful new lighting system that takes the game to the next level. A New Fight for the Ball: The player movements in Football are the single most important part of the game. In FIFA 22, these movements are now more intuitive, responsive, and realistic as you battle with your teammates to keep the ball. The new engine also enhances the responsiveness of the ball and the controls for dribbling and passing, making it feel more natural, balanced, and responsive. Fans and players are demanding more from their sport than ever before, which is why the new engine is especially tuned to be faster and more intuitive for online play. Better Ball Physics: The new engine's physics engine is built on feedback from real-world matches. These new advances that bring superior realism and deeper control mean that players can make tighter dribbles, spin the ball, change direction mid-air, and even control the ricochet of a shot. Better AI: FIFA 22 features a more responsive, physically accurate, and intelligent AI. As the players react to changes in the environment, you get the chance to put on a show of your own on the pitch. Perfect Ball Shots and Post-Game Shooting: With the enhanced engine comes the ability to do much more with your shots, including more accurate and controlled through-the-body shots. FIFA 22 also features improved feedback for
