Semiconductor devices, such as field effect transistors (FETs), have been integrated into many products. To achieve high integration, the sizes of the semiconductor devices must be reduced. To achieve high density and high speed with such small semiconductor devices, the gate oxide thickness must be reduced. A conventional semiconductor device formed with a thin gate oxide usually suffers from charge carrier punch-through. Recently, raised source/drain (S/D) FETs have been proposed to alleviate the problems of charge carrier punch-through. FIG. 1 illustrates a conventional FET with raised S/D regions. The channel region 18 of the FET is located between the S/D regions 12 and 14. The S/D regions 12 and 14 are raised on the substrate 11 to provide better isolation of the channel
