The market for advanced driver assistance systems (ADAS) is forecast to witness strong growth in the near future, with worldwide spending on ADAS set to exceed $7 billion in the 2017–2022 period, according to new research from ACG Research. This is an increase of 6.4 percent from spending levels of $6.6 billion in 2016. Automotive OEMs are expected to spend an average of $500 million on ADAS per year. It is estimated that the automotive OEM segment will account for 30 percent of total ADAS spending, with the automotive aftermarket also seeing strong sales growth. The study by ACG Research surveyed over

130 companies, including all of the world's major automotive OEMs, Tier 1 suppliers, and aftermarket parts suppliers. The results show that global spending on ADAS will grow to $10 billion between 2017 and 2022, a growth rate of 8.5 percent per year. This is an increase from the 7.8 percent average annual growth rates of the preceding five years. In terms of spending levels, the automotive OEMs are expected to spend an average of $500 million on ADAS per year from 2017 to 2022. This means they will account for 53 percent of total global ADAS spending. Meanwhile, the aftermarket is estimated to spend a total of $1.6 billion on ADAS systems through 2022. This will make up approximately 38 percent of 6d1f23a050
