follow the steps below to fix this issue:
open a windows explorer go to the following path c:\programdata\avast look for avast\avast.exe delete the avast\avast.exe file restart the antivirus scan of the autodesk software you'll now be able to open the autodesk software eventually, i resetted my autodesk software and windows 10 system, then uninstalled it and installed it again. i didn't even have to reinstall the software, i could just restore a backup and that's it. then everything is working great again! in that case try disabling the firewall, (windows firewall), or (uac) the autodesk desktop utility, or update your computer to windows 10 1809. if it still doesn't work, start a troubleshooting by running autodesk reinstallation. i found that after every reboot the autodesk desktop utility didn't give me any error or message when i opened it. so i then tried to uninstall and then reinstall. now the autodesk desktop utility gives me an error message when i try to open it. i cannot run my autodesk software even though i upgraded to windows 10 2019 and i don't know what to do. i always get a message box that says something like "the program has stopped working". help!

other avast 10 antivirus user have the same problem with avast saying there is a file hash collision in an av scan database with a simple solution. avast is trying to scan a file and avast is scanning another file with the same hash value so you can't open the file. avast claims there is a file hash collision in an av scan database. avast is trying to scan a file and avast is scanning another file with the same hash value so you can't open the file. this usually happens when you are trying to open a file that avast is currently scanning.
