The first thing we want to point out about this book, even going back to the Disciples of Madness from the previous codex, is that if there is a negative tabling effect (apart from poor balance) or need for a big buff in Codex terms, it isn't on one of these three pages: 4,5,6. It's on page 8 and 9, and while this is an okay starting point for the book, the ability to have you mind control (and totally unbalance) this many units at once, then either blast them into oblivion, or lead them around slashing wounds in a single book is phenomenal. The base ability is both a great buff, and also makes the mind control that much more potent. Btw, there are more than 6 models to control on your table, either using the Disciples, or two as Sanguine Servants. Glaives are massive in 10th edition, and we love that thanks to the combination of Swordbreaker and Warlord Trait, Warlords don't have to settle for just the one. Of course, a swordbreaker can get an awful lot of damage on a very cheap model, but all of this is nullified by the fact that in most situations you can also take a Cult of Strife Warlord Trait. Other than that, very good on a Cult. the Adolescent Conversion is 10% of the value, but the Total loss of corruption is HUGE, as with the Cult of Strife trait you save your 6 for Total Corruption instead. Master Succubi die a lot, and can have a lot of bad targets to pick off, and for more than 6 attacks they're very strong. The Dark AI Succubus is a Psychic Supremacy, and her ability gives her T1 Interceptions if she's the first into the fight, though she has to move to do it. It's a fine weapon because it has a ridiculous AP (4+), and the ability lets you override invulnerable saves for the turn after making the attack. The main issue with this weapon is that they have no wound-base damage, so although they might be more powerful than a Spitfire flamer, they won't be any more dangerous. It's also a Strength 4 attack, giving them no way to add to their AP, and doubling those cards on a roll of a 6 is unreliable, so this can be a bit of a drag, but it's a decent enough option if you've got a decent psyker. The bonus however is great, and is a simple way to get into an Enginseer, and then leap into your Control Zone, and then into your next engagement.
